Bonds Boosted by Data and Well-Received Auction

MBS Recap Matthew Graham | 4:43 PM

Jobless Claims data doesn't normally move the market, but it did this morning, even if only by a bit. It was enough to turn modest losses into modest gains ahead of the afternoon's 30yr bond auction. Here too, hopes were not high for a big reaction. After all, there was no real reaction to yesterday's 10yr auction. But things were different this time as traders bid more aggressively for the longer duration. With that, we had two modest-but-noticeable rallies that left trading levels right in line with this week's range after starting out at the highest yields of the week.

Lock / Float Considerations

Lower risk and lower reward now that bonds have slid into a lower consequence week. The calendar is very light and next week's CPI looms large as a huge potential win or loss (something that should keep bulls and bears from getting too excited in the meantime). Defensive clients are considering the nice rate sheet improvements over the past week and a half. Combined with the more sideways outlook, it presents a logical opportunity to circle the wagons. Risk-tolerant clients are waiting for bonds to do something more threatening before taking chips off the table.
