

MBS & TREASURY MARKETS

Daily Coverage. Industry Leading Perspective.

The Day Ahead: When is a Rally Not a Rally? (Explaining "Big" Overnight Move)

Up until last Friday, 10yr Treasury yields had consistently closed at 4.27-4.28 last week. Now this morning, we're at 4.27-4.28 again. That's the shortest way to explain that we're not dealing with a meaningful rally. It's only impressive when considered against the weird, panicky starting point created by the weird, panicky sell-off on Friday.

Another way to put this morning's move into perspective is to remember that a 10-12bp rally right now is equivalent to a 3-4bp rally during more normal times. As for justification, the approaches are limited to two options: shifting election odds and/or a reversal of a pre-weekend position dump that's now being reversed--probably a combination of the two.

Matthew M. Loan
Senior Loan Officer,
Mortgage Company, LLC.

mbslive.net

P: (704) 867-5309

M: (980) 867-5309

1050 W. Main St.
Charlotte NC 28031

NMLS: #987654321

Christina "Demo"
Realtor

Managing Partner, Real Estate Company, LLC.

mbslive.net

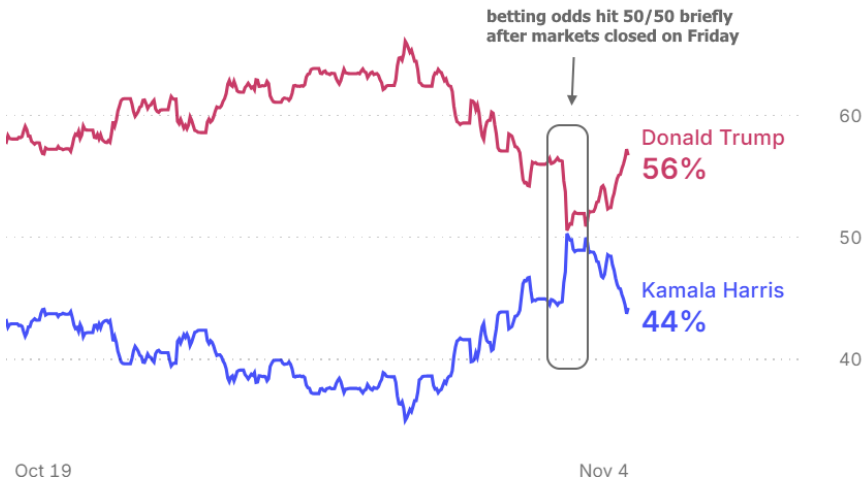

P: (704) 555-1212

M: (980) 555-1212

social+test@mbslive.net

12954 S. Broad St.
Charlotte NC 28031

Oct 19

Nov 4