

Nothing New For Existing Home Sales

Existing-home sales held roughly steady in August after tepid uptick in July. That NAR reported a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.0 million, down 0.2% from July but 1.8% higher than a year ago. Sales have now hovered near 75% of pre-pandemic norms for three years, reflecting the same constrained but stable environment that has defined the market since 2022.

NAR Chief Economist Lawrence Yun said mortgage rates are beginning to ease and inventory is slowly improving, which should help future sales. He added that record-high housing wealth and a strong stock market may support move-up activity, even as the lower end of the market remains tight.

- Investor/Second-Home Buyer Share: 21% (up slightly from 20% last month)
- Distressed Sales Share: 2% (unchanged from July; up slightly from 1% a year ago)

August's data reinforces the broader theme: demand is low, but at least it's stable. Slightly softer mortgage rates and slowly rising inventory could help break the logjam if those trends persist into the fall.
