

The Day Ahead: Mostly Sideways Despite Some Help From Europe

In addition to this week's holiday closure (early close Wednesday, fully closed Thursday), the econ calendar is also lacking in terms of potential sources of volatility. A majority of any meaningful momentum is most likely to come from month/quarter/year-end trading today and tomorrow, but think of that more like a caveat for any incidental movement rather than a prediction. Monday is off to an OK start with modest overnight gains driven by rally in EU bonds after their return from holiday. Treasuries gladly followed in the illiquid overnight hours, but have been less willing to do so now that the domestic session is underway.

Jeff Diaz

Mortgage Loan Originator,
The Jeff Diaz Team -
Barrett Financial Group
L.L.C

thejeffdiazteam.com
P: (602) 777-7765
jeff@barrettfinancial.com
2701 E Insight Way
Chandler AZ 85297-8528
NMLS# 980070
Company NMLS# 181106

