Decent Gains Amid De-Escalation Headlines

MBS Recap Matthew Graham | 3:53 PM

Don't worry about what actually happened, who actually spoke to whom, and the details of the conversations that may or may not have happened. Today's simplest fact is that the President said things that can be done under the heading of "de-escalation" of the Iran war and markets were obviously and immediately willing to respond. It's the response that's encouraging-regardless of the details. By no means does this constitute the big shift we're waiting for, but it at least suggests such a shift will be possible when the war is truly over.

Market Movement Recap

- 09:09 AM Weaker overnight then sharply stronger just after 7am on "war might end" headlines. MBS up 6 ticks (.19) and 10yr down 1.8bps at 4.366 after being as high as 4.442 just before 7am.
- 10:36 AM Additional gains on additional Iran negotiation headlines. MBS up nearly 3/8ths and 10yr down 3.8bps at 4.345
- 12:49 PM

03:09 PM Nice recovery. MBS up 3/8ths and 10yr down 5.5bps at 4.328

Lock / Float Considerations

- updated 3/23/26

Volatile day for bonds with a decent proof of concept regarding the correlation between Iran war de-escalation and bond market gains. We'd remain cautious and defensive until a clear trend of de-escalation (and, importantly, bond market response) is established. That will take more than a day or two of gains.
