

MORTGAGE RATE WATCH

Daily Coverage. Industry Leading Perspective.

Mortgage Rates Recover Some of Yesterday's Losses

Mortgage rates spiked on Wednesday (yesterday) after reports suggested a prolonged blockade of the Strait of Hormuz. As has been the case for most of the past 2 months, interest rate movement was clearly correlated with oil prices.

Now today, both are moving back in the other direction though not for reasons that are as obvious as yesterday's. The rally began just after 2am ET with both oil prices and bond yields dropping in concert. Lower bond yields mean lower rates, all else equal.

After hitting 6.50% for top-tier 30yr fixed rates, the average lender is back down to 6.45--roughly where they were yesterday morning before a round of mid-day increases in the afternoon.

Craig Garcia

President, Capital Partners Mortgage Services, LLC

P: (954) 271-2024

M: (561) 252-2532

1515 N University Dr #102D

Coral Springs FL 33071

#653593

Andrew Sesta

Realtor, The Keyes Company

www.eastcoastfloridarealestate.com

P: (772) 285-8702

M: (772) 285-8702

andrew@sestasalesteam.com

