

The Day Ahead: Modest Recovery Ahead of Econ Data

After hitting the highest yields in more than a month yesterday, bonds have managed to pick up a few bps. The bulk of the recovery was already in place by yesterday's close, but yields dropped another 2bps after war-related headlines just after 8am (US general said Iran's attacks yesterday were below the threshold for war). Oil prices and bond yields continue the same old correlation.

Coming up at 10am ET, we'll get 2 economic reports that have historically been capable market movers: Job Openings and ISM Services. We've seen some evidence that the market is still willing to react to data if it's far enough from expectations, but that risk is a bit asymmetric at present. Reason being: investors are waiting for economic weakness to show up due to high fuel prices. So it doesn't take as much of an upside surprise in the data to cause bond market weakness. Conversely, if data is slightly weaker than expected, that would be less of a surprise to most investors and thus not as much of a benefit to bonds.

Ian Overcarsh

Mortgage Banker, First National Bank

www.fnb-online.com/.../overcarshi

M: (704) 650-1922

overcarshi@fnb-corp.com

401 S. Graham Street
Charlotte NC 28202

1065792

Lillian Isaac

NC/SC Broker, Realtor®,
SRES License NC/SC
General Contractor |
Author, Lillian Isacc Realty

LillianIsaacRealty.com

P: (704) 492-8706

lillian@lillianisaacrealty.com

6277 Carolina Commons Dr. #363
Indian Land SC 29707