

MBS & TREASURY MARKETS

Daily Coverage. Industry Leading Perspective.

The Day Ahead: Another Slightly Stronger Start

Once again, bond yields dropped in the overnight session in concert with lower oil prices. Today's iteration is less swift than yesterday's, but after last week's sell-off, we'll take any green we can get. Econ data is light and inconsequential. The 7yr Treasury auction is typically not a source of drama. That leaves focus on any notable war headlines. Otherwise, Wednesday afternoon's Fed announcement remains the week's focal point for clarifying the Fed's policy stance and for the bond market to adjust accordingly.

Deanna Adinolfo-Rivera

Community Lending
Powered by Lower, LLC.

NMLS# 1124061

M: (239) 878-0107

deanna@communitylendingfl.com

8191 College Pkwy Suite 203

Fort Myers, FL 33919

NMLS#327112

The big picture remains little-changed, but slightly less dire than last week. Yields have returned inside the long-term trend channel. This doesn't predict the future, but it's nice to be inside the blue lines than breaking wildly above them.

10 Year Treasury

O4.630 H4.635 L4.623 C4.626

