Yesterday's Treasury buyback announcement and today's comments from Bessent make for good drama in financial news, but the actual market impact had run its course within minutes of the initial announcement and we haven't seen solid evidence that the market has continued to care. Rather, the ample evidence is that an overnight oil price spike pushed bond yields higher. Peaks and valleys aligned perfectly. Elevated corporate issuance lingers constantly in the background causing broad elevation in bonds, but not much of an intraday impulse (even after an afternoon announcement of a big Broadcom bond offering in the pipeline).

Lock / Float Considerations

- 8/20/26 - As we warned yesterday, ignore the noise on Treasury buyback drama and focus on the stuff that's actually mattered: chiefly, fuel prices. An overnight spike in oil served as a good reminder as bond yields followed the timing to the minute. Lock/float risk remains higher than normal as long as each new day brings another coin flip on the fate of the war and fuel prices.
