Solid Mid-Day Recovery For Rates

It's a rarity these days, but mortgage rates actually moved lower today by more than a token amount. The average top-tier 30yr fixed rate fell to 7.54% from 7.60% yesterday.

There are multiple potential factors in play when it comes to explaining the underlying bond market rally, but none of them stand out as an obvious singular motivation. For those curious, the list (which has several esoteric factors that we won't be fully explaining here) includes, but is not limited to:

- traders covering bets on higher rates ahead of tomorrow's jobs report
- concerns over European bond market contagion focused on France and Italy
- reassuring comments from Fed speakers helping Fed rate expectations move lower
- technical buying opportunity when Treasury yields hit 5.34% (10yr)

A day like today invites consideration about bigger picture ceilings, but it will need to bring friends in order for that conversation to continue. We are bound to see periodic sighs of relief any time rates move higher as relentlessly as they have in the past month.

Tomorrow's jobs report is as likely as anything to set the tone for the rest of that conversation. If job growth is much stronger than expected, the conversation is over until further notice. If it's much weaker than expected, we'll talk.

Scott Linton
Branch Manager, Osprey Mortgage
P: (909) 261-1606
scottlinton@hotmail.com
239 N Euclid Ave
Upland Ca 91786
284930

osprey

© MBS Live, LLC. All rights reserved. This newsletter is a service of MBS Live.