Complete Recap of Today's Market Activity

No Data, No Volatility

Market Summary: Friday, January 10, 2025 - 12:53AM

Bonds were only open for half the day due to the national day of mourning for Jimmy Carter. Overnight markets made for a slightly stronger start and those gains slowly eroded throughout the day. MBS closed at perfectly unchanged levels and 10yr yields were a hair lower as Treasuries continue "healing" after this week's auction cycle. Friday morning brings the jobs report, which is just as much of a potential volatility flash point as it always is.

MBS Still Positive, But Down an Eighth From Highs

Trading remains slow, sparse, and mostly inconsequential. MBS are still 1 tick (.03) higher on the day but down an eighth of a point from the AM highs. Lenders who released rate sheets at the time of those highs (before 10am ET) could technically justify a small, negative reprice.

10yr yields are still down 2bps on the day at 4.68, but up from lows of 4.644.

Selling seems to have leveled off for now after the most recent weakness.

Mortgage Rates Just a Hair Lower. Friday Could be Much More Volatile are driven by movement in the bond market and bonds were on a shortened schedule today due to the federal day of mourning for Jimmy Carter. As such, volume and volatility were in short supply. Still, overnight market movement allowed the average lender to offer a microscopic improvement versus yesterday.

Tomorrow (Friday, Jan 9th) is a different story. The big jobs report comes out at 8:30am ET. Bonds routinely react to this report more than any other scheduled monthly data. In other words, there is much higher potential for volatility tomorrow as that reaction plays out.

As always, there is no way to know which direction things will move in response to economic data until we actually have the data in hand. As always, it's not whether the data is higher or lower than last time, but rather, how it comes in compared to the median forecast.

In this case, the median forecast for job creation is 160k, much lower than last month's 227k. If jobs were to come in under 100k, rates would likely improve. If the number is over 200k, rates would likely rise. The unemployment rate is also a consideration. It's expected at 4.2%. Higher is better for rates, and vice versa.

Mortgage Rates' Holiday Break Ends With Next Week's Economic Data

Even as most of the world has spent the past two days thinking or saying "I can't believe it's 2025 already," mortgage rates won't get back from vacation until next week. They managed to make it through the entire holiday season without any major drama. That was in sharp contrast to the preceding month which saw a decent drop heading into early December and a sharp spike that accelerated aft...
