Softer Start Despite Tame ISM Manufacturing Data

Market Summary: Monday, June 2, 2025 - 1:41PM

The ISM Manufacturing PMI has more potential than most economic reports to cause a reaction in the bond market, even if it isn't perfectly consistent. As today's only big ticket data, it was well positioned to set the tone this morning. While it may not be doing that in a resounding fashion, one could still argue that the weaker result is least helping bonds avoid additional weakness.

Negative Reprice Risk Increasing

Bonds are selling off to the weakest levels of the day for debatable reasons (GDP Now update showing 4.6 vs 3.8 prev, perhaps? But that seems like a stretch).

10yr yields are quickly up 5 bps at 4.456 and MBS are down nearly a quarter point. Fortunately, most lenders were out with rates before the 10am rally and are thus only now seeing about an eighth of a point of weakness. Lenders who priced after 10am are at more risk of repricing.

Another Small Victory For Mortgage Rates

It has turned out to be a surprisingly calm week for and, as of today, largely a victorious one, even if the victories have been modest. Today's installment involves a 0.02% drop in the average top tier 30yr fixed rate. This brings the index to the lowest level of the week and a fairly decent 0.12% below last Friday's levels.

Most of this week's movement took place on Tuesday morning after markets returned from the holiday weekend. Movement has been minimal since then.

While economic data is a perennial source of inspiration for rates, none of this week's data had a major impact. In today's case, the PCE inflation data was in line with expectations, so it wouldn't have made a case for a rate reaction under normal circumstances, let alone the present environment in which that data is taken with a grain of salt as markets wait to see if tariff-driven inflation materializes over the coming months.

Calmer, Friendlier Week For Rates Amid Mixed Signals For Housing

In addition to being shorter than normal due to the Memorial Day holiday, there wasn't much meat on this week's event calendar - at least not as far as the rate market was concerned. Earnings releases caused some volatility in the stock market, but rates drifted sideways to slightly lower after a larger drop on Tuesday. Interestingly enough, Tuesday's drop was more to do with bond market improve...
