JOLTS Data Didn't Help, But it Didn't Hurt Much Either

Market Summary: Wednesday, June 4, 2025 - 1:46AM

Bonds were moderately stronger overnight and then weaker after the 10am JOLTS data. The data itself was mixed with Job Openings higher (bad for rates) and job quits lower (good for rates). The headline took precedence and pushed yields back into higher territory on the day. Selling ebbed in the PM hours and MBS ultimately made it back to positive territory. Headlines regarding the Senate taking up the budget bill are ramping up, but with no discernible impact on the bond market so far. Bottom line, a roughly unchanged close in bonds requires very little explanation. On to the next data with ISM Services on Wednesday!

Negative Reprice Risk Increasing

MBS are now down 3 ticks (.09) on the day. These are the lowest levels and more than an eighth of a point below most lenders' rate sheet print times. As such, negative reprices are increasingly possible.

10yr yields are up 2.4bps at 4.47 -- the highs of the day, but just barely.

Uneventful Day For Mortgage Rates

Sometimes a Tuesday is just a Tuesday for . In the present week, any day is capable of generating some volatility due to one of several economic reports on the calendar. This isn't always the case, but the first week of any given month is action-packed when it comes to data.

Econ data is one of the top reasons that might move higher or lower on any given day. Today's most relevant report was the Job Openings and Labor Turnover Survey (JOLTS). While this is fair stale as far as labor market data goes, it has nonetheless proven to be a capable market mover.

JOLTS may have been worth some more volatility today, but it carried a mixed message. On one hand, job openings moved higher (bad for rates). On the other hand, a separate part of the report showed fewer people giving up their employment (good for rates).

The offsetting penalties limited the overall reaction, but it was nonetheless "bad for rates." That said, the average lender is still right in line with yesterday's latest levels because the bond market had improved overnight. In other words, JOLTS data simply took bonds/rates back to where they were yesterday afternoon.

Calmer, Friendlier Week For Rates Amid Mixed Signals For Housing

In addition to being shorter than normal due to the Memorial Day holiday, there wasn't much meat on this week's event calendar- at least not as far as the rate market was concerned. Earnings releases caused some volatility in the stock market, but rates drifted sideways to slightly lower after a larger drop on Tuesday. Interestingly enough, Tuesday's drop was more to do with bond market improve...
