No Whammies in Wednesday's Data. JOLTS Rescheduled for Thursday

Market Summary: Thursday, February 5, 2026 - 4:32AM

With the big jobs report on hold until next Wednesday, this morning's ADP/ISM duo had to do most of the week's heavy lifting in terms of important econ data. The response was underwhelming, at best. ADP was a complete non-event, but also fairly close to consensus. ISM was mixed and generally helped bonds hold their ground with yields moving down from highs at 10am. The day's range remained inside yesterday's and there were minimal losses by the 3pm close. The JOLTS data that was scheduled for Tuesday will now be coming out on Thursday morning.

MBS Down an Eighth From Highs

Bonds are largely range-bound and nothing new or interesting is happening this afternoon. That said, MBS have now drifted down to new lows for the day (just barely) with current prices an eighth of a point below mid-day highs.

Most lenders priced this morning when MBS were only a hair higher than they are now. Thus, those lenders aren't looking at any serious negative repricing risk. Lenders who repriced for the better, however, could be considering reprices.

Mortgage Rates Hold Perfectly Steady at 2-Week Highs

The average top tier 30yr fixed mortgage rate hit its highest levels in 2 weeks yesterday. The caveat was that the range has been very narrow during these 2 weeks. As such, by remaining unchanged versus yesterday, today's rates are part of the same narrow range (6.15-6.20% for MND's index).

There were two relevant economic reports this morning as well as an update from the Treasury department regarding borrowing expectations. The latter is important for because the level of Treasury issuance is a primary ingredient in determining almost any consumer lending rate in the U.S.

Higher issuance would increase the supply of bonds. Higher bond supply would decrease the price of bonds. And when bond prices fall, rates move higher, all else equal. This morning's update kept issuance unchanged in the short term, but noted the probability of increased issuance in the next fiscal year. This put some upward pressure on rates early in the day, but a tame report on the services sector helped bonds find their footing.

Flat bonds = flat rates. The end.

Best Month For Home Price Gains in Over a Year, But Context Matters

This week's newsletter is all about context when it comes to economic data and market movement. One point of view may provide a clear takeaway while zooming out completely changes the picture. Let's start with an easy one. The early January mortgage rate rally led to an obvious surge in refinance applications. Taken together with the mini refi boom in September 2025, things look pretty ac...
