Complete Recap of Today's Market Activity

Slowest Day in Over a Month. No Reaction to Data

Market Summary: Thursday, April 16, 2026 - 11:32AM

Thursday has thus far been the slowest and most sideways day since February 24th, before the start of the Iran war. A lull in war-related developments is likely helping. While there are plenty of isolated headlines, the only thing the market really cares about is the timeline for the war to be over. As such, the present ceasefire is a sort of limbo that's clearly better than peak tension in late March, but not an "all clear" to jump back in the market (unless it's the stock market, apparently). There are a few economic reports this morning, but no market reaction.

Market Movement Recap

- 08:30 AM Giving up overnight gains before data and no change since. MBS unchanged and 10yr down half a bp at 4.279 (up from lows of 4.265).
- 10:04 AM 10yr yields moved up 1bp back to unchanged levels of 4.281 and MBS are now down 1 tick (.03)

Down an Eighth From Highs

This is more of a heads-up alert for now as the quick little selling spree has already leveled off. Causes remain unclear as there are no compelling headlines to link to the move, but it definitely hit both stocks and bonds at the same time.

10yr yields moved up 1bp back to unchanged levels of 4.281 and MBS are now down 1 tick (.03) after being up 3 ticks before the move. In other words, "down an eighth of a point from the highs."

Some lenders released rates at those highs, so they could technically justify a negative reprice, but only the jumpiest lenders ever do such things in this exact scenario.

Mortgage Rates Essentially Sideways at Recent Lows

On Tuesday, the average top-tier 30yr fixed mortgage rate hit the lowest level in exactly 4 weeks. If you're not interested in splitting hairs, today's rates are essentially the same. Although our official average is 0.01% higher, that's such a small change that many of today's rate quotes will look the same as yesterday's.

In the bigger picture, these rates are about halfway between the highs seen in late March and the lowest rates in more than 3 years seen at the end of February.

The bond market (which dictates rates) remains focused on developments in the Iran war, but there's an ever-higher bar for relevant news. At this point the average war update is not having a noticeable impact. It will take a material change in the status of the war and a clear response in energy prices to catch the bond market's attention.

War Still Weighing on Rates, But Volatility Continues to Ebb

Whereas the entire month of March was "up, up, and away" for interest rates, April has been far calmer by comparison. The average lender ended the week in slightly lower territory and there was less volatility to boot. Refreshingly, the lower volatility means that weekly surveys were aligned with daily rates in showing the modest drop (unlike last week). That said, there's no question th...
