Gradual Selling Leaves Bonds Only Slightly Stronger.

Market Summary: Monday, June 15, 2026 - 4:09PM

With both sides signing the peace memo, the market was immediately willing to react in the overnight session, but that reaction fell short of what we might expect for an official peace deal. This is a bond market problem more than an Iran war problem. Case in point, oil prices stayed flat after their big overnight drop. Stocks added to strong overnight gains. Bonds were the odd man out. Part of the reason is that bonds did more than stocks to get in position for this eventuality last week. As of today, both the S&P and 10yr are close enough to the best recent levels to say the overall market reaction has been fairly even keeled. We'd also expect more bullishness among bond traders when the deal is officially official (possibly after Friday's scheduled meeting in Switzerland). Finally, bonds could be holding back a bit to see how Wednesday's Fed announcement goes.

Down More Than an Eighth From Highs

Bonds are still in positive territory on the day, but at the weakest levels. 10yr yields are down 1.5bps at 4.47, up about 3bps from the lows.

MBS are up an eighth, but down 6 ticks (.19) from AM highs. Lenders who priced during or slightly after those highs (10-10:40am ET) could technically justify a negative reprice, but also consider how much the rate sheet improved vs Friday (i.e. the more it improved, the bigger the risk).

Mortgage Rates Hit One-Month Lows

The bad news: didn't fall quite as much as one might have expected following the confirmation of the Iran peace deal. The good news: rates had already begun pricing in the peace deal last Thursday and it only took a modest improvement for the average lender to match the lowest level in exactly one month.

For context, today's MND rate index of 6.56% is the same as the most recent low seen on May 29th. Before that, you'd have to go back to 5/15 to see anything lower. For even more context, prior to 5/15, today's rates would have been the 3rd highest since August 1st, 2025.

In other words, we are in solid shape in the context of the last month, but still in an elevated range.
