Tuesday Sell-Off Sticking; Warsh and ISM On Deck

Market Summary: Wednesday, July 1, 2026 - 3:27PM

Bonds have added modestly to Tuesday's big quarter-end sell-off (a phenomenon that has nothing to do with the sorts of fundamental developments that dictate a vast majority of market movement). Thankfully, the random plumbing-related volatility is behind us as we begin the new quarter. Old-school potential volatility awaits. The morning's first order of business will be to see if Warsh says anything interesting at the SINTRA conference. After that, ISM Manufacturing data at 10am is a B+ market mover if it falls far enough from expectations.

Down Just Over an Eighth From The Highs

Bonds hit their highs just after 10am this morning and have been selling slowly since then. The last few minutes bring 5.0 UMBS down 5 ticks (.16) versus those highs. The catch is that "just after 10am" is on the later side of the normal morning price window for lenders.

Bottom line: lenders who printed their first rate sheet well after 10am could technically justify a small reprice. Lenders who priced at 10am (or earlier) still haven't seen meaningful deterioration from their rate sheet print times.

Mortgage Rates Jump to Highest Levels in a Week

In a real sense, today's rate update is more of an addendum to yesterday's rate update. Yesterday afternoon saw heavy, continued selling in the bond market amid a flood of trading associated with the end of the quarter. Because we are directly based on the bond market, this resulted in multiple lenders raising rates late in the day (after yesterday's update).

Today has been much calmer by comparison with bonds holding fairly close to yesterday's latest levels after some early weakness. Even so, there was still some weakness for mortgage lenders to account for. From yesterday morning, the average lender is up 0.11% on a top tier 30yr fixed quote.

If we adjust yesterday afternoon to account for the late day reprices, today's rates are, instead, 0.05% higher. Either way, we're currently back in line with the highs from the beginning of last week, but still below the highs from early June or mid-May.
